Fall On Proverb

Bleeding Through

My hands are open
Can't you see them being burned
This faith is the deepest
You could ask for what's remembered
With the guilt wrapped around our necks

That's right I just stopped what I didn't start
I missed the chance that will never come
That's right I just stopped what I didn't start
I missed the chance that will never come

Better to regret what I have done
I'd give anything just to forget
A smile so worthwhile
But you can only rent it

That's right I just stopped what I didn't start
I missed the chance that will never come
That's right I just stopped what I didn't start
I missed the chance that will never come

Never come
Never come
Never come
Never come
Come
Come
Come

My hands are open
My hands are open
My hands are open
My hands are open

My hands are open
My hands are open
My hands are open
My hands are open
