

You & I

Bloom

We sit, too nervous to speak
Waiting for the moment to say what we need
We fight with the words we don't wanna say
But we'd be naive to think that we're okay

I cut off your lifeline, and you cut off mine
Nothing left to hold onto when one becomes two
What I'd do to feel you one last time
I know you feel the same

What we planted became overgrown
Underwatered and unkept
Together but alone, I made our flowers wilt
You pulled the roots packed in the earth
But now there's nothing left to do
A chance to tend to gardens of our own
A chance to mend, a chance to grow

I cut off your lifeline, and you cut off mine
Nothing left to hold onto when one becomes two
What I'd do to feel you one last time
I know you feel the same

I know, but it can't be that way
Another time, another place
We'd like to stay, but not today
Maybe if things were different
Another world, another space
You and I, another day

The sun beams off your skin
Reminding me of what has been
The sun beams off your skin
Reminding me of what has been
(The sun beams off your skin)
(Reminding me of what has been)

I know, but it can't be that way
Another time, another place
We'd like to stay, but not today
Maybe if things were different
Another world, another space
You and I, another day
