

Gravity (Pauline's Response To Amy)

The Blow

I know you and I know you need someone to hold you all the time
All the time
I know you and I know you need someone to hold you all
the time
All the time

So who's cupping you right now, underneath your shirt?
And who watches you from below when the breeze goes up your skirt?
I know you and I know you need someone In the night to press you down to the mattress, in your bed
Someone to hold your body to the ground
When all that air gets in your head I know you and I know about the hands that have you right now
From behind, can you feel those hands? They're not mine.
It's fine.
Cause I, I can't protect you From all the things overhead
There's those hands that have you, and Amy How could I compete with gravity's hands?
Hold you tighter than anyone could? it will always have you

It's reaching up with a hot hand from the center of the planet and iholding you - it's holding you and it's stroking the inside of your veins as your blood runs through Gravity gets so much closer than I ever could to you Like in your bed, with the sheets against your skin and if the night tries sneaking in if the night tries sneaking in cause i know you Amy, i know with you the night tries to get in the night wants to get in but you know, you could even let it come inside you could float on it's dark ride you could enjoy the ride cause in the end you'll be safe cause gravity wins and those massive hands of gravity they pin you in the morning you'll wake up and so will i we'll both be wrapped in gravity's heavy arms