

What I Was Missing

Born Without Bones

What I saw was never ending
So I went back to what I was missing
Is there a husband or a father in me?
Then I woke up

Wish you could've seen all the things I would see
Wish you could've been there laughing with me
Wish we could've opened somewhere inside
And we could always sleep there and no one will die

What I saw was another degree
Shied away from love that I was risking
If my mother and my brother agree
I won't wake up

Wish they could've seen all the things I would see
Wish they could've been there laughing with me
Wish we could've opened somewhere inside
We could always sleep there and no one will die

You'll die
You'll die
You'll die
You'll die
You will always be my summer sky when you arrive
We'll find some shade to stop the burning, crisis averted
You will always be my summer sky if you arrive
And if you want to stop the screaming then sing it with me

You will honestly say that it's hard for you to change
When you've always had it your way
You will honestly say that it's hard for you to change
When you've always had it your way
You will honestly say that it's hard for you to change
When you've always had it your way
You will honestly say that it's hard for you to sing
So take me back to what I was missing
Take me back to what I was missing
Take me back to what I was missing
Take me back to what I was missing
