

From the Depths

Breakdown of Sanity

Hey you

I know that you hear me, I know that you feel me, no chance to set you free

I know that you fear me and that you can't see me

I know all your diary stories and all your dirty Secrets that y ou can't hide

I know that you know me, but you can't tell anyone

You can't locate me anymore

The idea of innocence is ridiculous, just steer Away from these recurring thoughts

You are a liar, you are a masquerader

Maybe you can mislead your environment

Maybe you can convince your friends and enemies

Just smile and go away, just cry and hate yourself

But you can never deceive me

I can feel that you are trying to deny my existence

When you are fighting against your ego and your misgivings

There is no one who could help you, no one Who would believe yo u

When we would appear together, enrage united

Forgetting what's right or wrong, what's laudable or vile

Too many stories untold, too many facts Unrecognized

It's already enough

Never try to deceive me

And now you can feel me clearly

Never try to deceive me

Now you can learn to accept my terrifying antic

This is truly the end, this is cruelly the truth

But I do as I always did, because you are I, and I am you

We're coming from the depths