

Burning Airlines Give You So Much More

Brian Eno

When I got back home
I found a message on the door
Sweet Regina's gone to China
Cross legged on the floor

Of a burning jet that's smoothly flying
Burning airlines give you so much more

How does she intend
To live when she's in far Cathay?
I somehow can't imagine her
Just planting rice all day

Maybe she will do a bit of spying
With micro cameras hidden in her hair

I guess Regina's on the plane
A news week on her knees
While miles below the curlews call
From strangely stunted trees

The painted sage sits just as though he's flying
Regina's jet disturbs his wispy beard

When you reach Kyoto
Send a postcard if you can
And please convey my fond regards
To Chih-Hao's girl Yu-Lan

I heard a rumor, they were getting married
But someone left the papers in Japan
