

I Ain't Never Seen A Rooster With A Tail Like That Before

Broadway

Honestly, you're so convincing
But your actions are contradicting
"I never should have walked away" you say, and pretend I'm not listening
Did you even have a motive this time?
Well I bet it wasn't better than mine
This photograph will tell me everything I'll ever need to know

When solitude has left you hanging, and all you hear are songs
we sang
Then that has to tell you something
Well I guess that if you got it flaunt it
But that's not what you've always wanted
"Come on opportunity's knocking... he'll never know if you close your window"

A little gesture you thought was clever
I know how to act surprised
This by far your worst endeavour
And I can see right through those eyes
At least you made a good attempt
I admire your ambition
You're walking backwards into battle
Without any ammunition

I fire once to show my hand, and then again to get you scared
I'll make you think that you were injured
You should have known I would come prepared

When solitude has left you hanging, and all you hear are songs
we sang
Then that has to tell you something
Well I guess that if you got it flaunt it
But that's not what you've always wanted
"Come on opportunity's knocking... he'll never know if you close
your window"

If this all a bad dream, then why am I awake?

When solitude has left you hanging, and all you hear are songs
we sang
Then that has to tell you something
Well I guess that if you got it flaunt it
But that's not what you've always wanted
"Come on opportunity's knocking... he'll never know if you close
your window"