I wrote a long letter
To the moon one day
It isn't brighter than you but
I lit a small candle
The nameless bird that sings
In the park at dawn
Where are you
Oh you

Why are you crying
It's only me and you here
Me and you
Oh you

Your singing voice
That follows deep into the night
Brings the scarlet morning
One step, then another step

Dawn passes by and
When that moon falls asleep
Then the blue light that was with me
Disappears

Today, too, I go on living just enough
Keeping in step, wearing my feet out just enough
The sun makes me breathless
The world has stripped me of all I have
Without a choice, with no other alternative
Under the moonlight I am picking up my scattered self
I call you moonchild
We are the children of the moon
We draw breath from the cold air of dawn
Yes we're livin' and dyin' at the same time
But right now it's alright to open your eyes
Because like any movie, like any dialogue
The whole world is blue under the moonlight

The nameless bird that sings

In the park at dawn
Where are you
Oh you

Why are you crying
It's only you and me here
Me and you
Oh you

Your singing voice
That follows deep into the night
Brings the scarlet morning
One step, then another step

Dawn passes by and
When that moon falls asleep
Disappears

Your singing voice
That follows deep into the night
Brings the scarlet morning
One step, then another step

Dawn passes by and
Then the blue light that was with me
Disappears

Dawn passes by and
