I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself

I know

Every life's a movie

We got different stars and stories

We got different nights and mornings

Our scenarios ain't just boring

I find this movie very amusing

Everyday, I want to shoot it well

I want to caress myself

I want to caress myself

But you know, sometimes I really really hate myself

To be honest, quite often, I really hate myself

When I really hate myself, I go to Dduksum

I just stand there with the familiar darkness

With the people that are smiling and beer,
Which makes me smile
Coming to me softly, fear, which holds my hand
It's okay because everyone is in twos or threes
It'd be nice if I had friends too

The world is just another name for despair
My height is just another diameter for the earth
I am all of my joy and anxiety
It repeats everyday, the love and hate directed to me
Hey you, who's looking over the Han River
If we bump into each other while passing, would it be fate?
Or maybe we bumped into each other in our past life
Maybe we bumped into each other countless times

In the darkness,
People look happier than the day
Everyone else knows where they're supposed to be
But only I walk without purpose
But still, blending in with them is more comfortable
Dduksum, which has swallowed up the night
Hands me an entirely different world
I want to be free
I want to be free from freedom
Because right now I'm happy but I'm unhappy
I'm looking at myself
At Dduksum

I wish I could love myself
I wish I could love myself
I wish I could love myself
I wish I could love myself

I wish I could love myself
I wish I could love myself
I wish I could love myself
I wish I could love myself
