Brooklyn Steakhouse

Bumblefoot

My reservation was for 9 All heads look down There was no clock around I tried but couldn't make it on time Couldn't find a lie Watches stopped, broken clocks My, my hands are tied And I can't hold the lie And I know I can never eat here again Hey, Peter Luger, let me in It's all my fault Father Time - I have sinned I missed my plate of splatterfat ribs No one forgives Traffic costs dirty bibs My, my hands were tied And I had crossed the line And I know I can never eat here again (I don't know what to do, nobody care 'bout no fair Yeah, I'm comin' up on a meat beat down Service with a frown - cause I was late I get a cold plate You punish me - that's not how it was supposed to be) (I screw you and I screw me too - it's not what I meant But my actions didn't live up to my intentions or my expectations The reservation was for 4 but they just wanna show me And get me outta there) My, my hands are tied And I can't hold the lie And I know I can never eat here again And I'll starve till I die (I should have went to Vegas diner 'round the corner Where the price is good, the food is worse, and it's in Bensonhurst)

And I had crossed the line
(Another time another night I could have been better satisfied
I tried, it's gonna be the last time)

The bill was bigger than my wallet, and bigger than my

(You murdered my night - the food was not right

My, my hands were tied appetite)

And I know I can never eat here again
