

Can't Help It

Cafuné

Told you I can't help it
You say it doesn't have to be this way
It doesn't feel like brain rot
My skin just craves the warmth of summer days

And now you try to make it better, but the void gets only deeper with time
I thought that shit healed all
The little broken part is bigger than I could even fathom
It's why sometimes, I think my all is

Not enough
The world wants to know if you're tough
So call their bluff
Don't answer with silence, why let them decide that you're
Not enough?
Doing it all for the love
I know too much
Don't answer with silence 'cause they don't decide it, no

I know it's almost over
Shrinking like the walls are closing in
Thanks for the reminder of good news and good times
Of course I want to go back there again

But then I try to see more clearly, and the memory fades to nothing
It's time I left that shit behind

It's not enough
The world wants to know if you're tough
So call their bluff
Don't answer with silence, why let them decide that you're
Not enough?
I'm doing it all for the love
I know, I know this much
Don't answer with silence 'cause they don't decide it, no
