

Regrets

Casey Donahew Band

I keep staring down this highway
And you'd still be here if I had it my way
But pages of our fairy tale are torn
But I've got my pride to keep me warm

And now this room feels like a tomb
on the dark side of the moon
And I know you're in his arms again
I should have begged you to stay
And never let you walk away
I should've told you that my hearts always been yours

So let these empty memories burn
Because you have not returned
And you know regrets
they are the hardest lessons learned

I often wonder if I ever cross your mind
Now I know you're gone
But my heart still thinks that there's time
And there's no life left in this place we called a home
The hardest part of waking up is knowing I'm alone

And now this room feels like a tomb
on the dark side of the moon
And I know you're in his arms again
I should have begged you to stay
And never let you walk away
I should've told you that my hearts always been yours

So let these empty memories burn
Because you have not returned
And you know regrets
they are the hardest lessons learned

But I'll be waiting if you need me
Because my heart can't say goodbye, yeah!

Now this room feels like a tomb
on the dark side of the moon
And I know you're in his arms again
I wish I would've begged you to stay
But I just let you walk away
You know you'll always have my heart

You know you'll always have my heart!

So let these empty memories burn
Because you have not returned
And you know regrets
they are the hardest lessons learned

You know regrets
they are the hardest lessons learned
