

Lunatic

Cassadee Pope

You walk with such a confidence that makes you look so strong
And I try to match your shadow, but my strides are just too small
You glide along with the rise and fall of any kind of crowd
As I fight against the tide that takes me, hoping you will pull me out
But it's my own demon, shouldn't you be leaving now?

Filled with question marks, don't know who I am
And I hate to be alone
How could you love someone like this?
You must think I'm a lunatic
I don't say the most appropriate things
And my words can be cold as stone
How could you love someone like this?
You must think I'm a lunatic

From the day we met I was sure that was our first and last good bye
Cuz everyone knows that lightning never strikes the same place twice
So I'm still trying to figure out why you showed up so soon Cuz after all, I'm forever Earth bound and you're the man on the moon
Should've seen this coming, shouldn't you be running out the door?

Filled with question marks, don't know who I am
And I hate to be alone
How could you love someone like this?
You must think I'm a lunatic
I don't say the most appropriate things
And my words can be cold as stone
How could you love someone like this?
You must think I'm a lunatic

I'm a hazard baby
And a little crazy
And oh, oh
But if you don't care, then I don't care anymore

Filled with question marks, don't know who I am
And I hate to be alone
How could you love someone like this?
You must think I'm a lunatic, lunatic
I don't say the most appropriate things
And my words can be cold as stone
How could you love someone like this?

You must think I'm a lunatic
A lunatic
