A million miles away, from where you are How did I let you get away under these stars A thousand bridges burned I won't look back A hundred lessons learned I won't let this moment pass What would you say what would you do Who would you hold onto Where would you go with nothing to lose Would you change Who would you love, would you do it all the same If today was your last day These memories are scars from my past No room for broken hearts cause they don't last They won't hold you They won't hold you down Cause they don't last