Young Enough To Know It All

Something clicked inside my head The second I turned the key To that old red Trans-Am The sound of all that power My first time on the street Made me feel like a man

Nobody could tell me nothin' I didn't need anyone's advice Never knew anybody's old man who Ever got anything right With every little taste of freedom I felt about ten feet tall Back when I was young enough Young enough to know it all

The night I brought my girl Home to meet my family My dad took me aside I can still hear him sayin' "Son, you may think it's love But she's gonna take you for a ride"

Nobody could tell me nothin' I didn't need anyone's advice Never knew anybody's old man who Ever got anything right With every little taste of freedom I felt about ten feet tall Back when I was young enough Young enough to know it all

A boy tryin' to be man Yeah, he thinks that he can walk before he crawls But that's just part of being young Young enough to know it all

Nobody could tell me nothin' I didn't need anyone's advice Never knew anybody's old man who Ever got anything right With every little taste of freedom I felt about ten feet tall Back when I was young enough Young enough to know it all
