

Upon Arrival

Charlie Burg

Upon arrival in Berlin
I called a cab and got on in
I knew I hadn't too much time
Before the clock and your anger aligned

You placed the necklace in my hand
The one you wore to match your brand
And after making love all night
You whispered to me your greatest advice
You said

Ooh, don't let your heart go and tell you it's over
I guess I never really knew you at all
Ooh, don't let the blue start to take over
Don't run away, don't run away

Upon arrival in New York
I climbed the stairs up to the door
Oh my apartment felt so strange
Did I truly leave my cage?

I saw the world, I felt alone
Forever searching for my home
Another flight away
From the pain inside of yesterday

Ooh, don't let your heart go and tell you it's over
I guess I never really knew you at all
Ooh, don't let the blue start to take over
Don't run away, don't run away
Ooh, don't let your heart go and tell you it's over
I guess I never really knew you at all
Ooh, don't let the blue start to take over
Don't run away, don't run away

Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep

Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep

Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep
Why do I keep running away?
Why do I keep running away?
