

So It Seems

Charlie Cunningham

You can watch what you eat
The company you keep
Mind the way you speak with
People that you meet
They wait there in the darkness
Pulling us apart, but
You could feed the spark that silences us

They've fallen
We'll wind our way down
And you'll find your saviour
And relive my failure now
Leave us reminded

Just remember to breathe
Before you find a new reason to fight me
Don't let it take up your time
It could get lonely
Just you and me only
But don't let it cloud up your mind

They've fallen
We'll wind our way down
We'll make ourselves proud
You've turned yourself 'round now
Give it some time

It's the face you saw
The one you knew before
It's right there with you
It's asking you for meaning
Just a phase of doubt
That you can learn to live without
Though intuition is telling you to leave
It always seems
Their worst opinions, you let yourself believe
But things are changing now
We never wanted to find ourselves around here
We wanted to retreat
When the phase of doubt
Is never-ending, you learn to work around it
You'll stumble underneath
It's quite the feat
To be out there with you both, helplessly defeated
Though it seems
This indecision has turned to self-belief

For the sake of the moment, they let go
For the sake of the moment, we let go
