

Lying That You Love Me

Charlie Simpson

I don't need you anymore
I tell myself
Turning pages, tryna find the
Chapter's end

I was too in love with your flaws
Saw the signs, missed it all
Maybe I was under your spell
You shot us down, started war
Killed us off, wanted more
Said I'd never need you again
Said I'd never need you again

But I miss you
Lying that you love me
And I miss you
Saying that you're sorry
I know that I'm better off alone
And maybe I'm a fool 'cause I can't let go
I miss you
Lying that you love me

Won't you say it again and again and again
Again and again and again

I don't need to call you anymore, they said
But when when I do you're still the gun to my head

I was too in love with your flaws
Saw the signs, missed 'em all
Honey I was under your spell
You shot us down, started war
Killed us off, wanted more
Said I'd never need you again
Said I'd never need you again

But I miss you
Lying that you love me
And I miss you
Saying that you're sorry
I know that I'm better off alone
And maybe I'm a fool because I can't let go
But I miss you
Lying that you love me

So won't you say it again and again and again
Say it again and again and again

Just say it again and again
Lying that you love me
Just say it again and again
Lying that you love me
