

Tremble

Charlotte Martin

We're wild and tame and wild again
We're on and off and sometimes friends
With failed attempts we analyze
The strange suggestions we disguise

I let our kiss fall behind a stone

I read the corners of your mouth
I try to speak but have no sounds
I'm out to get you anyway
Under the starlit milky way

I let the spark become a blaze

Uh oh I am in too deep now so it doesn't matter
How I far I go how long I run after you
Uh oh I can't stop myself from feeling the tremble
Uh oh I don't have control over this without you

I never tried to cross the line
But in my mind did several times
I turn the page and slam the door
But you still linger even more

I still can taste you in my bordeaux

Uh oh I am in too deep now so it doesn't matter
How far I go how long I run after you
Uh oh I can't stop myself from feeling the tremble
Uh oh I don't have control over this kind of glue

Who am I without you
Spring is always seduced
By the snow's brainwashing power

Between the sacred and profane
No body hears me chant your name
Another year has gone again
And I will never be the same

I keep you close under my breath

Uh oh I am in too deep now so it doesn't matter
How far I go how long I run after you
Uh oh I can't stop myself from feeling the tremble
Uh oh I don't have control
Uh oh I am in too deep now so it doesn't matter
How far I go how long I run after you
Uh oh I can't stop myself from feeling the tremble
Uh oh I don't have control over this without you
