Water Breaks Stone

Charlotte Martin

Out of the stratosphere Armed with a medicated dream of what will never be Love can be poisonous Uncertain spinning in the air Yet hold the weight of rome

As the fire hates the snow Can you please stay, please go As the water breaks the stone You start to break me slow Slowly down My love I've got no power

In pictures of our youth I threw myself into your night Into your parallel truths Could never get away I'd rather sit collecting dust Too brave too dangerous

As the fire hates the snow Can you please stay, please go As the water breaks the stone You start to break me slow Slowly down My love I've got no power

And on and on it goes and on and on I try And on and on it goes and on and on I try And let my heaviest burdens go I cannot love someone I don't know Can't let my insecurities show I wanna pace but you'll never know

As the fire hates the snow Can you please stay, please go As the water breaks the stone You start to break me slow Slowly down My love I've got no power And on and on it goes And on and on it goes I set my mind I set myself off my mind I set my mind I set off my mind I set my mind I set off my mind I set my mind I set off my mind
