A chauffeur dressed in gray, holds a sign, in leather gloves, With instructions to meet the VIP upon arrival.

Father, mother, and sister trading smiles and playful shoves; And their son is coming back home, coming to stay, ooh, woh, woh;

A lovely teenage queen stands there, waits for the boy she love s;

And she dreams of the summertime with him, upon arrival.

Now announcing the touchdown of the flight, it's right on time; And a wave of excitement sweeps the room, ooh, woh, woh; ooh, w oh, woh.

Each second of every minute seems eternal, time standing still; Hearts beating quicker, minds racing fast.

Then suddenly shouts of laughter, tears of joy, flashes of light;

Handshake, introductions, lover's kiss.

Now, as the people go separate ways, I stand amazed; Everyone has a story you could tell, upon arrival.

Still a girl in dark glasses waits until everyone's gone.

And she weeps, she's all alone, her love is lost, ooh, woh, woh; ooh, woh, woh.