

I'll Be There

Chris Knight

You leave the light on when you sleep
'Cause you're dreams are dark and hard to keep
Another night will soon be gone
The light of day will make you strong
But that wont lessen any pain
You wear it well, but its such a heavy chain

Right now you hurt too much
You can't even stand a tender touch
I know you probably like to be alone
But if I can help you through
These things that trouble you
And make them easier to bare
I'll be there

Now I won't bother to pretend
That I've walked the miles to where you've been
And once I caught you by surprise
And saw the hard road in your eyes
And the memories you drag around
Its gettin' time for you to lay your burdens down
