

Away

Chris Mann

I wish that I wasn't built like this
There are things only God can fix
There's too much about you that I miss
You're the sun setting in the west
You're the heart beating in my chest
Every room feels like a room that you've just left

Away, away, how am I supposed to find the strength Away, away, away, how am I supposed to find the strength to be
away
From you, from you

I see your face unexpectedly
In the rush of a crowded street
Day and night and the spaces in between Oh you're a shadow on the sidewalk here
That I follow then you disappear
Try to shake you but I see you everywhere

Away, away, how am I supposed to find the strength
Away, away, away, how am I supposed to find the strength to be
From you, from you

Away, away, how am I supposed to find the strength
Away, away, away, how am I supposed to find the strength to be
away
From you, from you...
