

Daydream

Chris Webby

I see myself in another light
'Cause I always felt like I was nothing like
Who they wanted me to be
Made my way through hell to find another life
But from what I can tell, I'm doing something right
Now the daylight dawns, my destiny, -y, -y
Had to find a way up out the box I'm in
Had to reach within myself to find the wind
That'll carry me to where I dropped the pin
When I manifest in my direction
Never gonna catch the wave before I learn to swim
Had to keep the flame alight that burns within
Now he is I, no lying, I am him
Hit the drum roll, let it begin

I don't need no one to save me
My whole life I've been the same me
They would try to call me crazy
But who's the crazy one now? Yeah
And really, can you blame me?
With all these devils tryna break free
Still I'm high up in a daydream
And you ain't pulling me down, down

I don't put on no act, this ain't a movie role
Still, I follow a path I never knew before
Tryna keep my feet on solid ground
And you don't know me like that, least I'm assuming so
But even right where I'm at, I still got room to grow
Just to keep from falling down, down, down
Got a bone to pick with who I used to be
But I've grown into the dude that's true to me
If they know, they know, if not, they're soon to see
My determination, hesitation
Never been a thing for me, I'm on the loose, agree or not
I won't stop, I reach through to seize
What I came here for so leave room to breathe
On a spree like you wouldn't believe

I don't need no one to save me
My whole life I've been the same me
They would try to call me crazy
But who's the crazy one now? Yeah
And really, can you blame me?
With all these devils tryna break free
Still I'm high up in a daydream
And you ain't pulling me down, down
