

Don't Say A Word

Chuck Ragan

Wake to sound again, still tinnitus reigns.
Waiting for the call, and the time to state it all.
Don't say a word.
Just lay like a stone and gather what it's worth.
I long to see her eyes, shining like a light.
That's taken hold my soul, and everything I know.

Don't say a word.

Just breath like the breeze, till those eyes open slow.
Before I rise I wish that I and everything I am.
Will never fail, fall or bail or be a spineless man.
Carry love till death and open up my chest.
To damn the world, damn the pain and find our way.

The will ist unsurpassed.
The courage always lasts.
The passion's always warm.
The spirit's never torn.

Don't say a word.

Just wake with the sun, and stand up for the one.
Now I rise I wish that I and everything I am.
Will never fail, fall or bail or be a spineless man.
Carry love till death and open up my chest.
To damn the world, damn the pain and find our way.
