

Hard To Love A Man

Ciaran Lavery

It's hard to love a man
Give him all that love
Give yourself and your body
Give your bones and your blood

Make a home for him in a place he already calls home
Leave him early in the morning and go to bed alone, while he sits downstairs, doing his work, but you still love him, then
When he loves his work

Now you're home alone
While he travels in time
He's convinced himself that you don't really cry, but he makes you cry
He makes you feel alone
It's hard to love a man when he's not at home

And he keeps his things away from your eyes
It's hard to love a man who just sits there, quiet, and he keeps a ring, and you will never know
It's hard to love a man
Harder than stone