

Social Insecurity

Citizen Fish

Growling as I stare at smiles from the other side of the street /is it the speed I'm walking at or the shoes upon my feet?/I couldn't afford the baseball boots that's not the game I play/and if you'd rather hang about I won't get in your way/if the words you backhand to your friend were meant for me to hear/I'll show you a better way to spend your time over a beer/or a coffee - come on mutant-head! let's drop the social games/call it a bluff call it enough quit calling each other names/there's hardly any difference in the nature of the threat/some like to be remembered by the reaction they can get/others need security in a certain social set/bth are too aware of what they yet still have to get/is no one ever satisfied with being what they are?/if you show me all your barbed wire I'll only show you scars/but tell me where you got it from and what it costs in friends/and I'll start to get a picture of a person not a trend/ignorance and affinity to outside influence/rejects the inner feeling at anyone's expense/what provoked attack was the nature of defence/the weak are strong in knowing that such strength is all pretence/so while you're staring at me I'll be grinning back at you/at various intensities we'll both know it's true/that what each other represents is an image we've been fed/If I'm a fucking waste of space than you're a mutant head/so let's discuss these attitudes and find some common ground/just doing that is ground enough to exercise the sound of insults, sights of malice, inbred scorn and ignorance/once beyond the posing we can find the relevance
