

Remember You

ClockClock

I remember I was here before
Not so long ago or maybe I don't know
But there's something 'bout the street that keeps me reminding
It's you I spend the night with, it's you I spend the night with

I don't know the color of your dress
But I remember your perfume
I got lipstick on my chest
Baby, I remember you

When the sky turns from gray into blue
I hope I remember you, I remember you
When I open up my eyes to see the sunrise
I hope I remember you, I remember you
I remember you
I remember you

Walking through the streets we had a dream
Maybe one or two, goddamn, I wish I knew
We call an Uber and we left, yeah, straight to your apartment
That's why I was parting, that's why I was parting

I don't know the color of your dress
But I remember your perfume
I got lipstick on my chest
Ooh, baby, I remember you

When the sky turns from gray into blue
I hope I remember you, I remember you
When I open up my eyes to see the sunrise
I hope I remember you, I remember you
I remember you
I remember you

When the sky turns from gray to blue
I hope I remember you, I remember you
When I open up my eyes to see the sunrise
I hope I remember you, I remember you
I remember you
I remember you