

The Joke

Coheed and Cambria

Does the pain feel better than it's ever?
Old habits informing bad routines (Old habits informing bad rou-)
Does the hero ever fit the adventure?
All or nothing is never what it means
And oh

I'll always come through
Don't waste your breath shouting "never" at the moon
Oh it won't feel right, if the sunlight
Comes up too quick, too soon

If you ever need to break somebody
I'll be here to star in that comedy
I'll be your joke tonight
(I'll be your joke tonight)
(I'll be your joke tonight)

Holding your umbrella under a falling sky
Holding your umbrella under a falling sky
Holding your umbrella under a falling sky (Holding your umbrella)

If you feel sick and buried under the weather
I'll be the cure that you need, the one you know
Oh oh oh

I'll always come through
Don't waste your breath shouting "never" at the moon
Oh it won't feel right, if the sunlight
Comes up too quick, too soon

If you ever need to break somebody
I'll be here to star in that comedy
I'll be your joke tonight
(I'll be your joke tonight)
(I'll be your joke tonight)

Holding your umbrella under a falling sky
Holding your umbrella under a falling sky
Holding your umbrella under a falling sky
Holding your umbrella under a falling sky
Holding your umbrella under a falling sky

I'll always come through
Don't waste your breath shouting "never" at the moon
It won't feel right, if the sunlight
Comes up too quick, too soon

If you ever need to break somebody
I'll be here to star in that comedy
I'll be your joke tonight
I'll be your joke tonight
I'll be your joke tonight