

Average American

Colby Acuff

Ain't it funny how two strangers
Ended up like this
We're just living at your mamas
Two kids raising kids
Well it's not what you expected
But it's just the way it is for an average American

Spend sixty thousand dollars
On degrees we don't use
Yeah you never see it coming
Until it's happening to you
Then all of the sudden out of the red, white and blue
You're an average American

Another stick figure family packed in a mini van
Maxing out our credit cards to go to Disney Land
When the kids grow up
Maybe we can learn to fall in love again
And be average Americans

After groceries and gas
You take the money that you have
Buy a lottery ticket
And you dream about a plan
You've got better odds to win
Than own a piece of land
For an average American

Another stick figure family packed in a mini van
Maxing out our credit cards to go to Disney Land
When the kids grow up
Maybe we can learn to fall in love again
And be average Americans

Another stick figure family packed in a mini van
Maxing out our credit cards to go to Disney Land
When the kids grow up
Maybe we can learn to fall in love again
And be average Americans