

Fantasy

Coney Hatch

You jump when they call you
And no one ever gives you your due
You work so hard to do what's expected of you
You must wonder sometimes; you must wonder sometimes
If the life you're living is really what you wanted to do
Was there a wild man once, fighting to get outside of you?
And don't you wonder sometimes?; don't you wonder sometimes?
If your fantasy could have been reality
If your fantasy could have been reality
Don't you wonder? Isn't it true..

That all your life you were working for another man
Never for you
And every year goes by, puts another wall up
But what can you do?
I wonder sometimes; don't you wonder sometimes?
If your fantasy could have been reality
If your fantasy could have been reality
Did you give it up too easily? A dream you'd never try
Don't just let it pass you by
'Cause your fantasy could have been reality
Your fantasy could have come true