

When the sun comes up, are we still one
When the darkness falls, would you come undone

Like you said before the dream began
When the water stops to flow, will we be one
Will you still be there, now the dream is gone

Like you said before the dream began
So much for all we've done now that the dream began
But do you even care, will you ever care
If the dream will be gone, now the dream is gone

Now the wheel has turn, are we still one
When the stones are thrown, would you come undone

Would you, now that the dream has began
When the heat cools down, will we be one
Will you still be there, when all the dream is gone

Said before the dream began
So much for all we've done now that the dream is gone
But do you even care, will you ever care
If the dream will be gone, now the dream is gone

Like you said before the dream began
So much for all we've done now that the dream is gone
But do you even care, will you ever care
If the dream will be gone, now the dream is gone
But do you even care, will you ever care
If the dream will be gone, now the dream is gone

When the sun comes up, are we still one
When the darkness falls, would you come undone