

Given Me

Dan Bremnes

I have wondered, how can I
Even start to change something?
It seems so hopeless
Should I even try?
And I question, oh am I
Just a drop in this ocean?
Is it worth the shove?
Oh I'm beginning to find

You've given me hands so I can serve
You've given me words for the hurting
You've given me eyes to see those who are in need
You've given me more than I deserve
For those who never had enough
And I finally see
I can start with what You've given me

It's so easy to make this
All about my own weakness
But You're calling me to the least of these
And as I reach out, You're healing
And it starts with believing
That an act of faith can set the prisoner free

You've given me hands so I can serve
You've given me words for the hurting
You've given me eyes to see those who are in need
You've given me more than I deserve
For those who never had enough
And now I finally see
That I can start with what You've given me

You gave a seed of faith to move mountains
I will start with what You've given
I know it's for Your plans

You've given me hands so I can serve
You've given me words for the hurting
You've given me eyes to see those who are in need
You've given me more than I deserve
For those who never had enough
And now I finally see
That I can start with what You've given me