

Broken

Dan Hill

You said you'd leave your house key in the mailbox once you pack up all your things
Something 'bout this breakup felt so brutal, left me so incomplete
I used to think that we would last forever, you were my perfect song
Felt so natural for us to be together until it felt so wrong

It was me who chose to end this, I was somewhere far away, so I called you
The surprise on your voice when I gave you the news chilled me through and through
I told you I was sorry but felt like I couldn't breathe and you thanked me
For speaking straight from the heart, how my words stumbled out so honestly

I'm getting too old for trauma, too old for breakups, time to make a change
Gonna close this chapter in my life, this is all so strange
My heart feels frozen, I'm broken

I try not to think about you but there's so many things that bring me back to us
Every song, every movie, makes me think of you and me before I broke your trust
You moved out of the city with your family, you never liked it here
With my emotions and my moods closing in on your, it was oh so clear

I'm getting too old for trauma, too old for breakups, time to make a change
Gonna close this chapter in my life, this is all so strange
My heart feels frozen, I'm broken

Time that I made a change

My heart feels frozen (so frozen), I'm broken (I'm broken)
So frozen (oh), broken

You said you'd leave your house key in the mailbox once you packed up all your things
