Scars

dandelion hands

'Til death do us part
Means nothing if we're dead
And as I sink into the earth
You'll be ripe inside my head
When I come out to dance
I'll just kiss you instead
You're my cold skin goddess
Aphrodite in red

Punched a hole through a wall
That I couldn't break
My knuckles bled out the sadness
From a pain I couldn't take
When my stomach's warm
I can read the things you make
But when my eyes start to water
I am a mistake

I tried so hard to be the one that you would think about
While you're away at school
I was never one to be remembered, why'd I think that
It would change now

The faint reminder that you're gone is growing
I can feel the sadness from my inside showing
When will you break this silence?
All I want is to be free
