

I Feel Electric

Daniel Johns

Wake up in danger, imperfect arrangement
Look in the mirror, I'm just not myself
Creature in danger, not much left to say
No reason and no rhyme, plugged together
Fever that I crave

Feel it in my bones, waking up at night
Dripping from my soul, running for my life
You can flick a switch, turn on all the lights
Turn on all the lights because I

I feel electric, yeah
I feel electric, yeah

My heart stopped beating, tangled in the wires
Future repeating, over and over again
I drowned desire, buoyant in the fire
Feels like I'm dying, so plug me in and let me out

Feel it in my bones, waking up at night
Dripping from my soul, running for my life
You can flick a switch, turn on all the lights
Turn on all the lights because I

I feel electric, yeah
I feel electric, yeah

When the sun goes down we can run this town
When the sun goes down we can run this town

I close my eyes and I finally see the wires revive
With every breath the brightness in my mind could light up the night
Shadows cast on all the bad thoughts I had inside
Out of the depths, I've been possessed, I'm rising like the tides
'Cause I'm feeling electric, yeah

Feel it in my bones, revel in the flight
Dripping from my soul, blood as cold as ice
You can flick the switch, turn on all the lights
Turn on all the lights because I

I feel electric, yeah
I feel electric, yeah
I feel electric, yeah
I feel electric, yeah

When the sun goes down we can run this town
When the sun goes down we can run this town
When the sun goes down we can run this town
When the sun goes down we can run this town
