

Loving Her Alone

Danny Vera

She said she was leaving town tonight
She couldn't even find the time to say goodbye
I guess that's how the silence starts
But I ain't getting used to the sound of her breaking my heart

It was late when she swept in
Didn't say a word, just got right in
I know she's never shown her cards
But I can't get used to the sound of her breaking my heart

And I cannot help but wonder where the hell she's going now
Maybe looking for a stranger on the cheating side of town
And I'm clinging to the memories like the ivy to a stone
She's loving you and others, but I'm loving her alone

Lord knows I've tried to pack my bags
Shut the door and leave for good this time
I'm not afraid to end up alone
But I can't stand the feeling of her letting go

The smell of liquor on my breath
The taste of her lips still lingers in my mind
I guess that how it goes to show
That I can't stand the feeling of her letting go

And I cannot help but wonder where the hell she's going now
Maybe looking for a stranger on the cheating side of town
And I'm clinging to the memories like the ivy to a stone
She's loving you and others, but I'm loving her alone
