Here Tonight

Dar Williams

Twenty different dresses across my bed
So many questions inside my head
A simple dinner that I cooked for hours
He brings a mason jar and a bunch of flowers

The storm is coming

Over on the mountain is flashing light
I could swear I'm feeling it here tonight
Just a little bit
I know I have been wrong

The wind is picking up, but we don't say a thing
What if I'm the only one who feels it happening?
The leaves are all aflutter on the lilac tree
He's sitting at the table, and he's looking at me

The storm is coming
And my heart says:
"Girl, you gotta know
That it's all coming down, coming down"

Over on the mountain is flashing light
I can swear I'm feeling it here tonight
Just a little bit
I know I have been wrong

Tell me it's the time gonna let the wind blow
Open up my heart like a window
Just a little bit
Like a window
Just a little bit

It's out on the horizon but it's coming near
He stands behind me and whispers in my ear:
"The storm is coming"

Over on the mountain is flashing light
I can swear I'm feeling it here tonight
Just a little bit
I know I can be wrong

Tell me it's the time gonna let the wind blow
Open up my heart like a window
Just a little bit
Like a window
Just a little bit
Like a window
Just a little bit
