

Someone Else

Darkside

When I fell from grace
I never realized
how deep the flood was around me.

A man whose life was toil
is like a kettle left to boil,
and the water left scars on me.

I know now who I am.
If only for a while,
I recognize the changes.
I feel like I did before the magic wore thin and the "baptism of stains" began.

They used to say I was
nowhere, man,
heading down
was my destiny.

But yesterday, I swear,
that was someone else not me.

Here I stand at the crossroads edge,
afraid to reach out for eternity,
One step, when I look down,
I see someone else not me.

Looking back and I see
someone else.

All my life they said I was going down,

but I'm still standing,

stronger, proud.

And today I know there's so much more I can be.

From where I stand at the crossroads edge,

there's a path leading out to sea.

And from somewhere

deep in my mind,

sirens sing out loud

songs of doubt

as only they know how.

But one glance back reminds, and I see,

someone else not me.

I keep looking back

at someone else... me?