

Fair Game

Dayglow

I'm broken, between disillusion
Outside the window, noon-day communion
I never understood kids in the neighborhood
Playing in the front yard, loosely committed
Now as I look upon them in the front lawn
It doesn't take long for me to get it

And oh, I've been losing my mind for quite some time
And oh, I find again that it has been something I
I have been so untrue, true, true, true, oh
'Cause, where, where, where, where did I lose you?

Oh, I was something so remarkable
It seems to me that she was only in my head
For a moment, I told you, I lost it
Tornado over conscious
Spinning around the room, you move in ways I'll never understand
So, my guess, at best is only to be just a second man

Her fingers were crossed behind her back
Well, they say it's fair game, but I don't trust like that
I guess the game we play is taking different shape
We make up new rules as we go along
And all along, the first line up along the fence
I'm in the last draft, as I expected

And oh, I've been losing my mind for quite some time
And oh, I find again that it has been something I
I have been so untrue, true, true, true, oh
'Cause, where, where, where, where did I lose you?

Oh, I was something so remarkable
It seems to me that she was only in my head
For a moment, I told you, I lost it
Tornado over conscious
Spinning around the room, you move in ways I'll never understand
So, my guess, at best is only to be just a second man

Well, I can see what's happening to us
I saw it from a mile away, okay, oh well

Oh, I was something so remarkable
It seems to me that she was only in my head
For a moment, I told you, I lost it
Tornado over conscious
Spinning around the room, you move in ways I'll never understand
So, my guess, at best is only to be just a second man
