

Drunk

Dayseeker

You have bones, that have to break
So stay drunk for the weekend
Peace of mind, on borrowed time
So forget what you're thinking
Temporary fiction
Can't control your diction
Speak slow
Told me that you see her
Told you that's the reaper
But you know her

Where can you run
Where can you hide

You have guilt, for your mistakes
So stay drunk 'til the year ends
Hallucinate, you see her face
And praise her like a godsend
Dopamine deficient
Crave her like an addiction
Let go
Heaven on the weekend
Diving off the deep end
Breathe slow

Where can you run
When the air gets thinner every step you take
Where can you hide
When death is coming closer
And all at once you will find
This is what it takes to be alive

You have loved, and you have lost
So stay drunk if it hurts less
Prescription-fed, to fix your head
But nothing can repair it
Father does it kill you
To see what we were put through
By her
Bottom of the deep end
Covered in a cold sweat
Burn slow

Where can you run
When the air gets thinner every step you take
Where can you hide
When death is coming closer
And all at once you will find
This is what it takes to be alive

This is what it takes
Where can you run
When the air gets thinner
Where can you hide
When you're drunk and bitter

This is what it takes
