The Child Inside

Depeche Mode

There is darkness and death in your eyes What have you got buried inside?
The shallow grave in your soul
The ghosts that have taken control

You really should have dug a little deeper there Body parts are starting to appear and scare the child inside aw ay

Each tear that flows down your face Trickles then picks up the pace And turns to a river inside A river that will not subside

I can hear that dreadful overflowing sound And watching from afar I see a child is drowned The child inside your heart

I can see you drifting away Heading for the light I can see you drifting away Every night

Why were you always inside? On days when the weather was fine And while we were running around You were nowhere to be found

You know you should have taken all your dolls to bed Well you were made to play games with your soul instead The child inside you died
