

A Savior on Capitol Hill

Derek Webb

I'm so tired of these mortal men with their hands on their wallets and their hearts full of sin scared of their enemies, scared of their friends and always running for re-election so come to DC if it be thy will because we've never had a savior on Capitol Hill you can always trust the devil or a politician to be the devil or a politician but beyond that friends you'd best beware 'cause at the Pentagon bar they're an inseparable pair and as long as the lobbyists are paying their bills we'll never have a savior on Capitol Hill

[Bridge]

all of our problems gonna disappear when we can whisper right in that President's ear he could walk right across the reflection pool in his combat boots and ten thousand dollar suit you can render unto Caesar everything that's his you can trust in his power to come to your defense it's the way of the world, the way of the gun it's the trading of an evil for a lesser one so don't hold your breath or your vote until you think you've finally found a savior up on Capitol Hill