Speeches won't be made today, clocks will carry on flowers wont be left in parks, work will still be done people wont be dressed in clack, babies will be born no flags will fly, the sun will rise, but we know that you are gone

You who love to love and believed we can never give enough

It wakes me every single night, thinking through the day did you stop at any time have doubts at any stage were you calm or were you numb or happy just to get it done I've lived my life without regret until today

You who love to love and believed we can never give enough

I didn't get to say goodbye the day before the day was trying to get to work on time, thats why i turned away and missed the most important thing you've ever tried to say I've lived my life without regret until today

You who love to love and believed we can never give enough and you who hoped that underneath we all felt the same that was until the day before the day
