Medieval

Diecast

Loose cannons fire as they target shades of grey
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break your skull
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break your skull
Loose cannons fire as they target shades of grey
Never mind a mind that never evolves from the medieval
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break your skull
Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break your skull

Damage is far greater than you ever could imagine
Then when you pump your seed full of sewage
If you need someone to hate just look into a mirror
There you'll see who will be buried six feet down
Buried six feet down, You're dead and buried

Ignorance breeds ignorance, breeds hatred and decay
Morals and sympathies start to fade
Never mind a mind that never looks to find the truth
Just hold your breath until you turn blue, and never exhale

I'll bide my time, for you to cross the line, cross the line, a ll it takes is time  $\,$

You feel so justified in actions that you take, fabricating dis honest mistakes

You reap what you sow, the burden that you bear will be inhuman e but fair,

It will be fair, it will be fair

Loose cannons fire, as they target shades of grey
Never mind a mind that never evolves from the medieval
Loose cannons fire, targeting shades of grey, loose cannons fire, targeting shades of grey

Never mind a mind that never evolves from the medieval Bone is thicker than stone, nothing could ever break your skull Damage is undamaged