

Under the Flood

Dismantled

Under the flood
It always seems so bright
Beneath the murky tides
The cities glow untouched

Under the flood
Their faces, frozen blank
No one to tell me why
The waters always on the rise

And I look back
Where we started
Had come so far
To lose it all
To the abyss
And as I hang on
I'm sure that soon I'll know
Just what it is like

Sinking slowly
Into the depths
The hands still clutch
The swollen faith
That brought them all down at once
Oh, what an ending to a wasted life

Under the flood
We never got that far
The sheets of rain blew past
All our attempts to calm it down

Under the flood
They said the earth cleaned up
All of the stains we brought
And all the roots we tore out

Under the flood
I hope you're happy now
I can't wait
To stop breathing for your human mass
When I'm dead
I hope the planet wipes
Every trace of my existence on this wretched ground

But now it's cooling down

And I look back
Where we started
Had come so far
To lose it all
To the abyss
No escaping it now
Time's up
I'm finally free at last

Sinking slowly
Into the depths

I'm so detached
I've got no faith
Just a fading blank thought
Oh, what an ending to a wasted life
