Born & Razed

Dispatch

Hey lady of the mountain, can you hear all, all the howling
Hey lady I think I'm bleeding, we've been walking, barely sleep ing

And we always look so far away, ask us why and we cannot say
All we know is that, we had to leave in seconds flat
Can you tuck us in, can we tell you where we've been

And it's full steam wrecking ahead
Born and razed, born and razed
It's like you got a price on your head
Born and razed, born and razed

Hey lady of the ocean, can you feel all, all the commotion
We are just floating, going nowhere, they're not going to save us, they let us drown here

And we sink down into the sea, and at last we cease to be
And at its source we'll find a ladder down to the divine
Where a horse that can barely walk, waits for her wings to be r evived

And it's full steam wrecking ahead
Born and razed, born and razed
It's like you got a price on your head
Born and razed, born and razed

You see the horse she lives in a cave
Lies on the floor with her crippled legs
Her wings are folded they gently heave
With her belly as she breaths
Waiting for the new moon eve
To just give her one more night
It's alright, we can finally see the shore,
And we never look back no more...

Since we came into this world
Born and razed, born and razed
We been knocked down at every turn
Born and razed, born and razed
