

Starting Over Again

Don Williams

I packed my heart in an old suitcase
Left the dust of yesterday's place
The sun came up, and for the first time
I felt the weight just fall behind

Starting over again, with a brand-new dawn
Every wrong turn taught me where I belong
I've lost some dreams, I've found a few
But I'm still standing, still breaking through
Yeah, I'm starting over again

There's a road that don't run straight
But I've learned to love the detours fate creates
The hardest part was letting go
Of the things I thought I had to know

Starting over again, with a brand-new dawn
Every wrong turn taught me where I belong
I've lost some dreams, I've found a few
But I'm still standing, still breaking through
Yeah, I'm starting over again

Every sunrise whispers clear
"Tomorrow's waiting – don't stay here."
So I'll keep moving, heart in hand
Trusting what I understand

Starting over again, and I'm not afraid
There's grace in the mess that life has made
The road is long, but the light's still true
And every mile leads me back to you
Yeah, I'm starting over again
