(S. Silverstein)

Rings of grass, crowns of flowers Gone, gone, gone Furs that are woven of whispering hours Gone, gone, gone, gone

She's gone away where the rings are real
And the furs have a warmth that a woman can feel
And 'round and 'round, around goes the wheel
And she's gone, gone, gone, gone, gone

Rings of grass, crowns of flowers Gone, gone, gone Castles of sand with seashell towers Gone, gone, gone, gone

She's gone away where the dreams are small But the castles are rock and they never fall And left me here to live among all That is gone, gone, gone, gone, gone

Rings of grass why do they die away? Gone, gone, gone Whispering hours where do they fly away? Gone, gone, gone, gone

And where's the wisdom to understand
That years will crumble all castles of sand
And the flowers and grass turn brown in our hands
When it's gone, gone, gone, gone, gone, gone, gone
