

Maybe

Drew Holcomb & The Neighbors

I have seen a mountain that I know I'll never climb
I have stood by the ocean, never learned to turn the tide
Didn't need to join the circus, or hop a roller coaster ride
I can't afford to spend any more time out of mind

Maybe we're not supposed to try everything
Maybe we're lost in what we want, not what we need
Everything is never enough
Takes you away from what you love
Maybe we're not supposed to try everything

The ironies of life hurt so hard sometimes it makes me laugh
And sometimes the real thing is better than the photograph
Hellos and goodbyes and so longs and don't cries remind me of what I lack
All the expectations have become a burden hanging on my back

Maybe we're not supposed to try everything
Maybe we're lost in what we want, not what we need
Everything is never enough
Takes you away from what you love
Maybe we're not supposed to try everything

Tomorrow will always be a mystery
Another run at trouble, a chance to be free

Maybe we're not supposed to try everything
Maybe we're lost in what we want, not what we need
Everything is never enough
Takes you away from what you love
Maybe we're not supposed to try everything
